

Burbank Leader

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 25, 2019 // Serving the Burbank community since 1901 // burbankleader.com

Tim Berger | Burbank Leader

PAMELA AND RICHARD NORTON stand in front of their yard on North Florence Street. This is the 50th year the Nortons have decorated their home, complete with various animated displays, a scavenger hunt, a Santa sign-in book and a live web stream from their holiday creation.

Celebrating half a century aglow

Dick and Pam Norton have gone above and beyond with their Christmas decorations for the past 50 years.

BY ANTHONY CLARK CARPIO

What started as a fun family holiday tradition has evolved into five decades of bringing Christmas cheer to visitors near and far.

This holiday season marks the 50th year that Dick and Pam Norton have decorated their house and front lawn in the 500 block of North Florence Street with yards of stringed lights, numerous stuffed animals and elaborate, handmade displays — which include a carousel, Ferris wheel and a train.

While the Nortons said the past 50 Christmases have sometimes been a blur for them, they said the physical aches and pains they deal with remind them that it's been 50 years of hard work.

Last Thursday night, the Nortons powered up their decorations, which can easily be seen from Verdugo Avenue.

Though the weather was chilly, families gazed at the Nortons' house in wonderment and shouted out the names of the various stuffed animals and characters they recognized as they scanned through the densely populated lawn.

"It's very rewarding, the feeling that you get when you see these people and they thank you for doing this," Pam Norton said.

"It's a labor of love. There's no question about it," Dick Norton added. "There's a lot of hours that go into putting this thing together."

The lights and animatronics are active from about 6 to 9 p.m. each night, barring bad weather.

Dick Norton said his family has been fortunate over the past few years that there's seldom been any rain during the holidays.

The decorations had to be covered once last year due to rain, but Dick Norton said there has been more precipitation this season.

"The display will be up through Dec. 27, assuming the rain doesn't take us out," he said. "If rain is in the forecast for the night, we'll cover [the display]."

The decorations on the Nortons' house have gone through different iterations throughout the years.

There was one point when Dick Norton decided to sell all of the mechanical displays he'd made and switch over to using electronic displays, which involve more lighting, on the lawn.

That lasted for about four years, but he said he missed having all of his animatronics, and he ended up buying back most of his decorations from the families to whom he had sold them.

As people continued to stop by their house to check out the decorations, the Nortons were given a surprise of their own this

Interim ordina regula ADUs approv

City Council me
say new state r
regarding gran
jeopardize the
the city's neigh

BY ANTHONY CLARK

Burbank City Co
are trying to fight b
state regulations r
sory-dwelling units
destroy single-fam
hoods in the city.

Council membe
voted last week to development-cont
regulating access
also known as ADU
as a temporary w
city with some p
laws go into effect

Maciel Medina,
ner for the city,
approved an ord
2018 regulating ADU
state laws introdu

However, state
approved new r
sembly bills 68 a Bill 13 — which v
current ordinan
and automatica
state's laws.

Medina said
interim ordinan
align the city's
those of the stat

Meanwhile, c
to return to co
an amendmen
nance that wil
vide a more pe

The intent regulations is housing shor
housing stoc
members thir
removes any
have on regul

For instance
quires that ADU

See Aglow, page A2

Battle with cancer continues, but second opinion

AGLOW

Continued from page A1

year.

Neighbors Brandy Coplan and Jaclyn Morse gave the Nortons a cake decorated to look like their house with all of its Christmas decorations.

Coplan, Morse and their families moved into the neighborhood about three years ago. They said their families, especially their children, have admired the impressive display put on by the Nortons each year.

Morse said she first learned about the Nortons' Christmas decorations from the real estate disclosures when her family purchased their house.

She said she appreciates the detail that goes into the display, especially the fact that the Nortons change the location of each stuffed animal every night.

Coplan, who lives in the house next to the Nortons, said her neighbors have set the bar when it comes to Christmas decorations.

"Living next to them has definitely upped the ante," Coplan said.

---

anthonyclark.carpio@latimes.com

Twitter: @acocarpio

